IN MEMORIAM:
In loving remembrance of our dear mother, Mrs. Rad Williams, who departed this life two years ago, April 6, 1949.
Just two years ago, dear mother,
Since you were called away.
And sad and sorrowful was the call.
Gone is the face we loved so dear.
Silent is the dear voice we love to hear.
It's sad and we wonder why,
The one we love so much must die.
Our lives may change from day to day, but love the memory of you, dear mother, will never pass away.
To those who have a wife and mother,
Treat her with tender care.
For you will never know the value
Until you see the vacant chair.
—Husband and Children.

Outposts of Atomic Age Now Encircle Globe

The atomic age, born on December 2, 1942, in a cramped and improvised laboratory beneath an athletic stadium at Chicago, now has pushed its frontier outposts to the farthest corners of the world.

Communist China is the latest to announce establishment of an atomic research institute—in Peiping. Even without this reported addition, the sun has long ceased to set on the world of the atom. The race to harness nuclear power goes on from fir-timbered forests of the Pacific Northwest to mountain fastnesses "somewhere in Siberia." From the windswept Berkshire downs in Britain to the New Mexico desert, from the Canadian north woods to Bombay.

In the United States, nearly 1,300 government and privately owned laboratories, industrial plants, colleges and research institutions are engaged in atomic energy development. The most important stand in lonely places—"cities the atom built"—isolated by land, fence and stern vigilance.

England has seven atomic centers. The most famous is Harwell, Berkshire, near Oxford, where Britain's "Brig"—as the atomic research piles are nicknamed—have been in operation for nearly three years. Uranium is processed at Springfields, Lancashire; not far away from Warrington there is a huge production reactors—Great Britain's Oak Ridge. Other English installations are at Risley, Aldermaston, Amersham and Capenhurst.

France began atomic experiments in 1946 at Fort de Chatillon in the Paris suburbs. Since then a second atomic center has been started. Norway is building a research pile at Kjeller, a suburb of Oslo. Sweden's Aktiebolaget Atomenergi, Inc., has a reactor under construction. Cyclotrons are already in operation in Stockholm and Uppsala.

Triple Play: Odessus To Varna to Stalin

It's a far cry from Odessus to Stalin, but Varna made it.

The maritime world knows Varna as one of the two important ports on Bulgaria's Black Sea coast. A city of 70,000, it is 160 miles north west of Istanbul, Turkey, and is the eastern terminus of major Bulgarian railroad lines.

Varna's ancient Greek name was Odessus, honoring Homer's wide-roving hero, who visited so many lands. Soviet Russia's satellite Bulgarian government recently decreed that Varna henceforth be known as Stalin, to honor the Soviet dictator who, ironically, has never ventured far from his country's border. So Stalin it is, followed by Varna in parentheses, on the map.

Patients' 'Community' Studied by Scientists

A Yale scientist believes that the way patients affect each other for good and for bad must be studied from a totally new angle.

And he feels that under certain conditions psychiatrists should ask themselves whether some neurotic patients, "who are still able to function in some areas of life," would do better as ambulatory out-patients than as hospital charges.

The study was undertaken with the knowledge that a patient spends 5 per cent of his time with a psychiatrist and the other 95 per cent with patients.

The scientist, whose real identity was known to only two staff officers of the hospital and to none of the resident psychiatrists immediately over him, found that in the mental hospital the patients form a whole new society among themselves. This may help or in some cases hinder therapy but the important fact is that it goes on all the time.

In a comment on the paper, Investigators said they regard this study as opening up a new area of psychiatric knowledge. They recommend that in the future an observer who is known to the patients might live on the ward 24 hours a day. The implications are that the whole physical and social structure of our mental hospitals should be restudied. Psychiatric wards should be so organized that the positive patient-to-patient relationships could be emphasized. In addition, a better activities program directed toward a return to the outside world could be arranged.

Carts Still Masters On World's Highways

Drawn by horse, ass, dog, ox and sometimes man, carts continue to move in untold numbers down the back roads of the earth. For millions of people, they still represent the most important means of transportation.

Along the war jammed roads of Korea, the ancart lumbers alongside steel tanks in the supply trains of communist forces, who drive before them other oncarts filled with the pitiful belongings of a homeless, fleeing people.

Halfway across the world in Sicily, one gayly decorated little cart has rolled onto the highway of international good will as a symbol of thanks from one country to another. Built to be sent to the U.S. as a present to George Marshall, the Sicilian cart has plastered on its sides the story of how Marshall Plan economic aid has assisted the Mediterranean island since World War II.

For untold centuries the cart has taken such varied activity well within its roll. As the first wheeled vehicle invented by man, it was destined to be mother to a prodigious family of conveyances. While its offspring has flashed by wearing different names and shapes, the rude farm cart of early man has logged through the millenniums largely unchanged, as present-day carts in Spain, Portugal, and South America will testify.

The first notable refinement of the cart was the Egyptian chariot which reached a high state of perfection as early as 1500 B.C. As the Old Testament, the Iliad, and other ancient writings duly note, it was the constant companion of the conqueror—fast for its day, decorative, sturdy, and deadly in battle. With its body mounted directly on the axle, however, it was far from comfortable.

City Families Do Canning

What may be news to both farmers and people in town is the fact that 44 per cent of city families do some home canning. This is an important food practice that many farmers might well consider more carefully. Family income has little affect on the amount of canning done. A survey by the U.S. Department of Agriculture shows that about the same per cent of families with $1,000 or less income do home preserving as families with incomes of $4,000, $5,000 or even $7,500 or more. No regional differences in canning, north or south, shows up. City families who did some canning put up an average of 85 quarts in a year. Fifty per cent of the food canned was vegetables, 40 per cent fruit, and 10 per cent jellies, jams, and preserves.

Spring is Erratic

The seasons are usually considered as quarters of the year, marked by the vernal equinox, the summer solstice, the autumnal equinox and the winter solstice. These are determined by various positions of the sun in its apparent annual movement about the sky (actually the result of the Earth's movement about the sun). In 1950 the vernal equinox (beginning of spring in the northern hemisphere) came on March 20, but in 1946 and 1947, by eastern standard time, it came on March 21. By the middle of the 21st century, it will frequently come as early as March 19, though at the beginning of the 22nd century it will come on the 21st once more.

NEWS ABOUT TOWN

By Mrs. Calvin Robinson

Forsythia.
A $5.00 word.
Put a good word.
For our town neers beautiful forsythia in spring as a beckoning call to start the season with gardens and clean-up and with programs for civic betterment. So let us be proune of our town and do our bit to keep Appomattox growing!

Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Stanley have returned from a trip to Oklahoma old Louisian. They also stopped over in Beaumont, Texas one night and attended a baseball game. They saw Crawford Davidson, of Appomattox who plays this year on the Beaumont club.

We were glad to see Mr. and Mrs. A. Hancock and son, Braxton, in town Tuesday. The Hancock's were en route to their home in Bennington, W. Va., after spending the winter months in St. Petersburg, Florida.

Dr. L. L. Gayle celebrated his birthday yesterday. Happy birthday, Doctor. We can't see that you are one day older!

We hope all of you attended the Home Club Flower Show last weekend. The flowers were beautiful and the event well staged.

Don't forget the chest x-ray clinic to be held here early in May.

We do not folks live to Appomattox during the spring and summer months to see the historic McLean house, the Old Court House. I understand that arrangements are being made to have the house open on Sunday afternoons.

Three out [illegible] and inspected the court operated by Mr. and Mrs. E. Carroll Smith. It is a perfect setting for the tourists to see more interesting things provided for the tourists coming to Appomattox. And D. Caldwell, Jr. has a top-notch tourist court on Route 460. These are a credit to our community and the quality of the accommodations any court we have on our recent trip to the south we stopped one night at a tourist court north of Baltimore. Most of the courts in that area have a station in each room, but it appeared to me that after driving all day one is not going to watch television too long when you finally stop to rest.

We would like to add a word of congratulation to the young ladies of Appomattox listed on today's society page in news of honors received at college. Someone asked Mr. Conner is not the first student to make Phi Beta Kappa?

We wondered about the big crowd in Appomattox last Saturday. We like to see a big crowd in town. Perhaps it was the approaching deadline for getting auto license tags that brought out so many.

And don't overlook the notice from J. H. O'Brien, commissioner of the revenue, about filing state income tax reports and your property lists. May 1 is the deadline.

How time flies by. We looked up the file of our paper for one year ago, and read all over again all the accounts of the big Dedication on April 16, 1949. Hardly seems a year ago, does it! Also copied down some other items from that 1949 issue: Pamplin was getting ready to dedicate its new baseball park; a preschool round-up of pupils was announced. The A. H. S. Senior Play was postponed to April 27. And a year ago, our friend, Mr. W. Pierce Odorr died.

Are you going anywhere during historic Garden Week in Virginia? We hope to get down to Norfolk to see the wonderful municipal gardens there. One of the most beautiful gardens in Virginia, and I think it is a fine thing when a city offers such a community attraction.

Artificial Breeding

Many Alabama dairymen are interested in artificial breeding of dairy cattle and, to date, have made much progress in this work. What is known as a "bull stud" is located at the Alabama Polytechnic Institute. The services of seven Jersey, four Guernsey, and three Holstein bulls at the "stud" are now available to a number of Alabama dairymen. Farmers who wish to obtain artificial breeding service hold a meeting and organize a co-operative artifical breeding association in their county. A board of directors is elected to run the business of the organization. Semen from the bulls is shipped from Auburn to a trained breeding technician.

U.S. Outranks Turkey

Turkey's name is far down on the list of contributors to today's international lead market. The United States leads the world in both production and consumption of this metal of many uses—not the least of which is its atomic-age application as a protective material against harmful radiation. U.S. annual output amounts to nearly 400,000 tons. Together with the U.S., three other countries, Mexico, Australia, and Canada, have accounted for about three-fourths of the world's total lead supply in recent years. Russia is believed to have recovered some 75,000 tons in 1948. Other important producers include Belgium, West Germany, France, Peru, and Spain. Spain, now out-distanced by many other nations, for centuries was the No 1 lead contributor.

Millions of Birds Returning to U.S.A.

With a chirp and a flutter several million feathered guardians of America's food basket are getting ready to come to work.

As the farmer sharpens his plow blades for spring planting, the first corps of insurance agents against crop-devouring insects and rodents are winging northward from their winter vacation grounds in Central and South America.

Until recently birds managed to keep their travel itineraries largely to themselves. Marking individual migrants with aluminum bands and tracing their movements through the cooperation of interested national and international agencies have done much in modern times toward producing reliable data on wide-ranging feathered excursions.

Migrations, as such, were observed, however, as far back as 3,500 years ago. The Bible records that a timely flight of migrating quail saved the Israelites from starvation in Sinai's wilderness. Later, the Greek naturalist and philosopher, Aristotle, set down some accurate observations on bird migration, although accepting the erroneous theory that some birds hibernate during the winter months in which persisted well into the 18th century.

An even more remarkable idea about the seasonal activity of birds was advanced in a pamphlet published in 1703 by "A Person of Learning and Piety," who is otherwise anonymous. This writer was firmly persuaded that birds wintered on the moon, negotiating this insignificant hop of well over 200,000 miles in a mere 60 days or so, and simultaneously enjoying the sweet renewal of sleep while in transit.

X-Ray and Radio Waves Known To Be Similar

Is there any similarity between radio waves and x-rays?

Yes, both are different forms of electromagnetic radiation, the difference being in the length of their waves, and also in their frequency, that is, the number of vibrations they make each second.

Visible light is in another part of the spectrum. Of highest frequency and shortest wave length, are the cosmic rays which bombard the Earth from space. These may vibrate as fast as 1,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000 times a second.

The frequency of rays is around 1,000,000,000,000,000 cycles per second, while that of visible light is about 800,000,000,000,000, broadcast radio waves about 1,000,000 and long wave radio about 50,000.

All of these travel at the same speed, about 186,000 miles per second.
